What's going on this week?

The last male northern white rhino has died, the conservation organization in Kenya caring for the animal announced last month, leaving only two remaining white rhinos in existence. The rhino, called Sudan who was 45 years old, was put down after his health declined. Ol Pejeta Conservancy and the Dvur Králové Zoo made the decision. The only two northern white rhinos still in existence are Sudan's daughter and granddaughter.

Things to talk about at home...

- 🍏 What is your favourite animal and why?
- 🍏 One of the main reasons the northern white rhino is so endangered is because of hunting, do you think more should be done to stop hunters?
- 🍏 Do you think humans have more of a right to the world, or do you think humans and animals have equal rights?
- 🍏 Do you think we should change how we live our lives if it helps endangered animals survive?
